

JUSTICE (and humor) FOR ALL

(A monthly humorletter) November 1999

This humorletter contains both clean original humor as well as clean bits of humor that have found their way to me via Email. Many times the original author is unknown so if you read something here that you find very funny it's OK to assume that I wrote it.

You have my permission to reproduce and distribute any items you'd like as well as the entire humor letter just so long as you are doing it for free and not for profit.- Enjoy!

Humor and Training Tip #31

Bill Schabel, a top trainer for Southern Company uses "Humor Breaks" to reenergize his participants. At the end of a break he plays a segment from my "He Who Laughs, Lasts" video tape.

Not only does it wake up the troops and get them focused on Bill's presentation but it also gets them back from the break on time!

One word of caution, unlike corporate humorists, videos from stand-up comedians can contain offensive material. Make sure you preview the tapes first or better yet only use tapes from professional, corporate humorists... like Jeff!

Humor Tip #30

Two companies were meeting to iron out some heated issues. When they arrived at the conference room, in the middle of the table was a Lazy Susan covered with all the makings for ice cream sundaes.

Everyone was armed with a bowl and spoon and told to help themselves. It was the perfect ice-breaker. It's hard to stay hostile when your mouth is full of sprinkles.

Tips From Mega Networking #7

The rule of "250"

This rule is based on the assumption that everyone knows 250 people counting fellow employees, family, friends, acquaintances from associations, civic and religious organizations, PTA, parents of children's friends, etc. Do you get the picture?

Now figure that everyone you're networking with also knows that many people and suddenly you're not just networking with them but with everyone they know. Make sure they know what you do and who is a good prospect for you. More on good prospects in the next issue. Happy Holidays!
